Geological Site Information

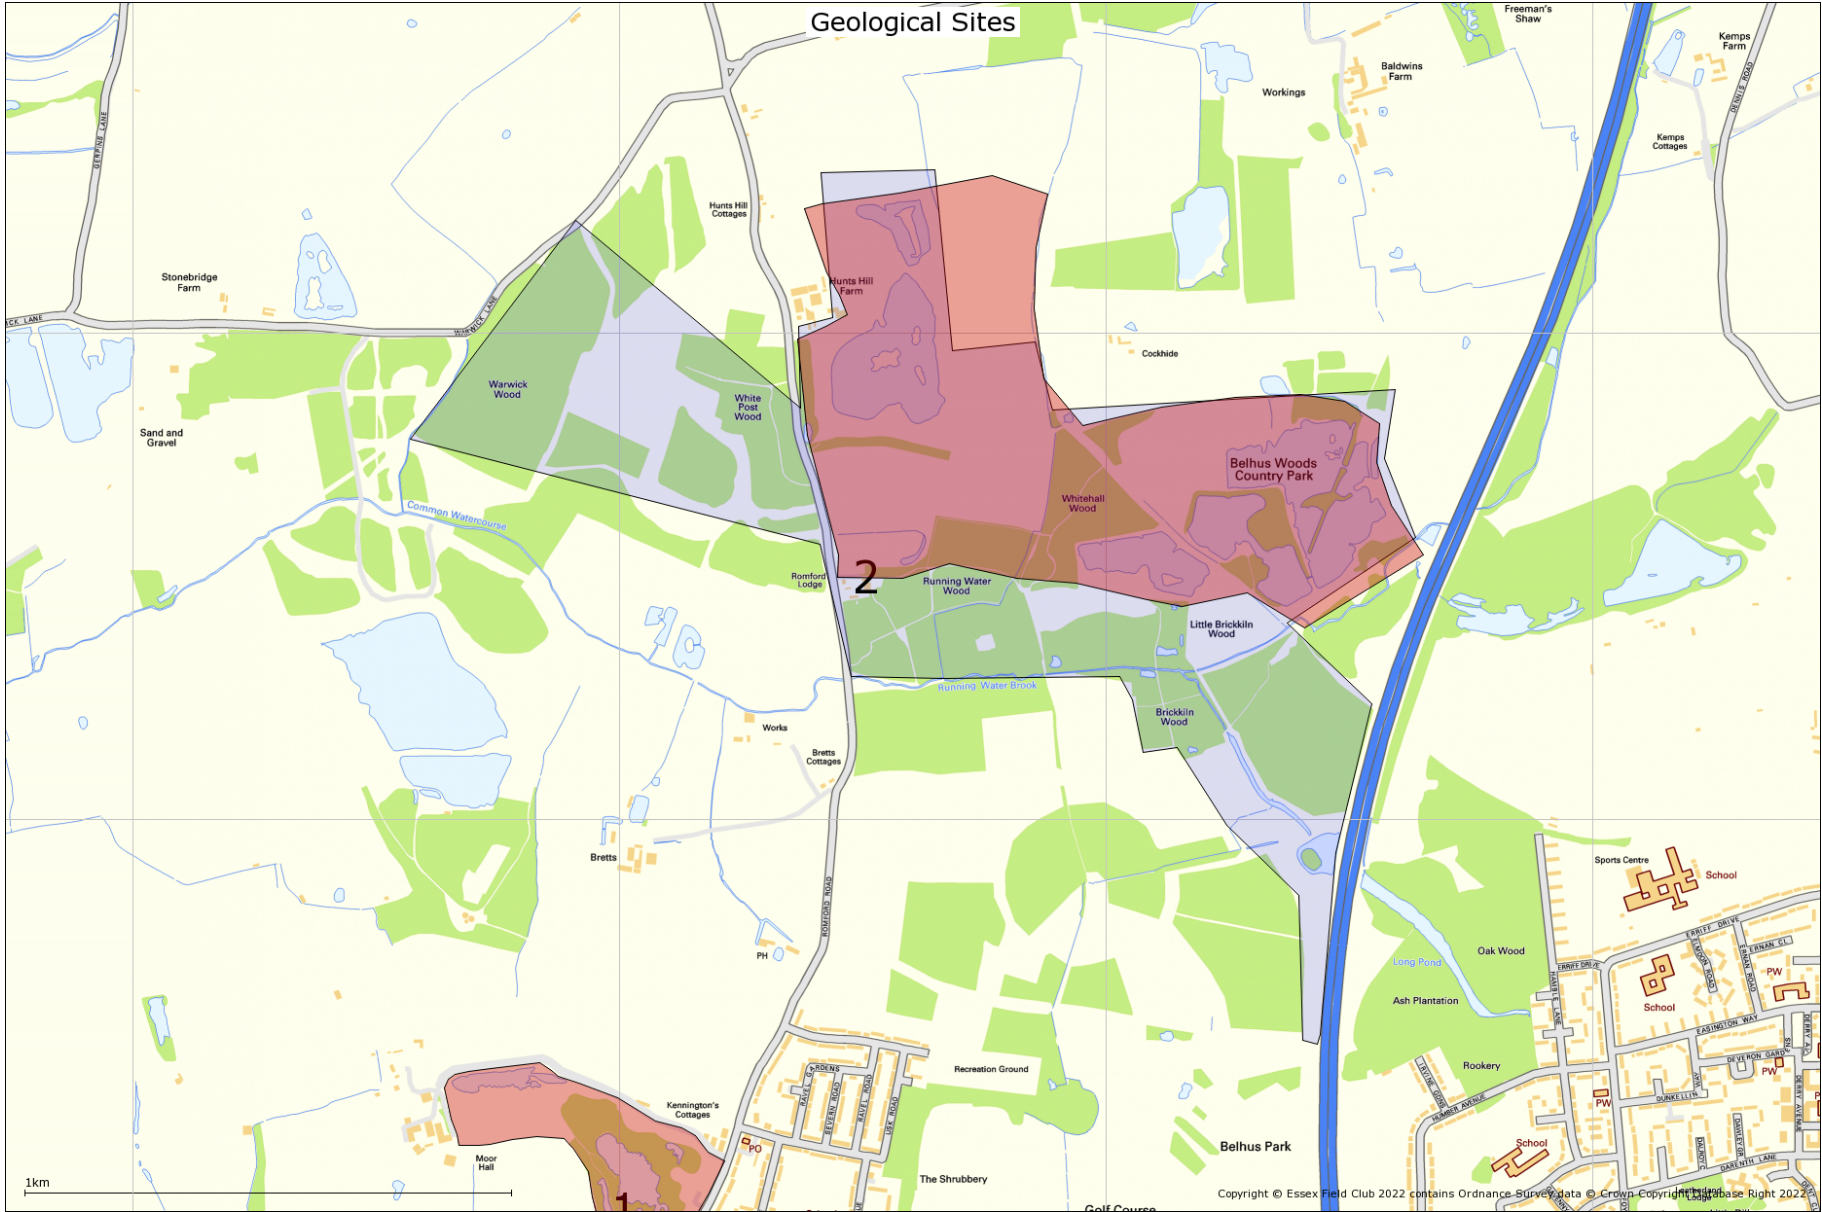

The geological site database includes and describes geological sites which are of regional or local importance for their scientific, historical and/or educational value unlike the strictly scientific criteria applied to the SSSIs (Sites of Special Scientific Interest) which are of national importance. These are not 'second tier' sites but sites of regional and local value in their own right.

Some of these sites are being designated as Local Geological Sites (LOGS), formerly called Regionally Important Geological Sites, or have the potential to be so designated, and these sites are marked as such. Existing SSSIs which have been designated for their geological importance are also included in this database.

Note: Some of the sites in the geological site database are solely of historical interest as a record of an important or interesting discovery. There are also sites which are not strictly geological but nevertheless have a geological connection, for example buildings constructed of local stone. These sites have not been included in this report.

Although many of the sites listed are publicly accessible, inclusion of a site in this database does not imply any rights of access. Permission to visit must always be obtained from the relevant landowner.

Geological Site Information

1. Kennington Park, Potential Local Geological Site, TQ560812

Site name: Kennington Park

Grid reference: TQ 560812

Brief description of site:

Kennington Park is a former gravel pit of geological interest with potential for research and for promoting geology. There were several small exposures of gravel (Orsett Heath Gravel) providing evidence of the former course of the Thames 400,000 years ago.

Summary of geological interest

Kennington Park was created in the 1990s from gravel pits alongside the Romford Road, and the former pits are now publicly accessible fishing lakes. When the park was created there were several exposures of gravel, particularly alongside the path on the northern edge of the park where it formed low cliffs up to 2 metres high. The best of these exposures is unfortunately now contained within a private fishing area known as Back Lake. The gravel is Orsett Heath Gravel which forms the oldest and highest terrace of the Lower Thames and about 400,000 years old.

This patch of Orsett Heath Gravel at Aveley exists because it was preserved as a meander core, in other words it was at the centre of a loop of the Thames and therefore not destroyed when the river was cutting down through its floodplain during the following terrace cycle (Bridgland 1994).

The adjacent pit to the west was the famous Sandy Lane Clay Pit which became famous in 1964 for the discovery of the Aveley elephants.

2. Belhus Woods Country Park, Potential Local Geological Site, TQ565825

Site name: Belhus Woods Country Park

Grid reference: TQ 565825

Brief description of site:

Belhus Woods Country Park combines ancient woodland, flower meadows, open grassland, and lakes. Much of it is restored and unrestored gravel pits which provide exposures of Corbets Tey Gravel, deposited by the Thames about 300,000 years ago. The unrestored gravel workings formerly known as Hunts Hill Farm and Whitehall Wood Pits have the most promising exposures.

Summary of geological interest

Straddling the border between Thurrock and the London Borough of Havering, Belhus Woods Country Park contains many lakes that were originally gravel pits. The area is situated on the Lynch Hill terrace of the Thames which consists of Corbets Tey Gravel, deposited by the river about 300,000 years ago. The gravel underlying the country park is about 4 metres (12 feet) thick and lies directly on London Clay bedrock.

Like other gravels of the Thames terraces, over 90 per cent of the Corbets Tey gravel is flint, with the remaining percentage consisting of quartz, quartzite, chert and rare volcanic rocks. These exotic rocks have been incorporated into the gravel as a result of the river reworking its older terraces as it meandered across the valley and cut down through the floodplain. These older terraces were deposited by the Thames when it was considerably larger, with a catchment area extending as far as North Wales.

The surrounding area is littered with active and disused gravel pits including Baldwins Farm Pit (TQ 578 838) about a kilometre north-east of the country park. Here, in 1978, an excavation revealed organic sediments wedged above the gravel and sand which yielded numerous species of plants representing a warm interglacial period. These deposits may be linked to similar discoveries in Belhus Park, Aveley (see separate site record) and in nearby Cranham and Upminster in the London Borough of Havering.

Belhus Woods Country Park is part of Thames Chase Community Forest and is managed by Essex County Council. The old gravel workings, formerly known as Hunts Hill Farm and Whitehall Wood Pits, have fortunately been spared the landscaping that is fashionable nowadays; therefore most of the pits still retain their original profiles with some gravel and sand still visible in the banks.

Access to the country park is from the Romford Road and facilities include parking, toilets and a visitor centre.
